

STORM'S TERRORS

Death, Devastation and Ruin From
Wind and Floods.Sad Havoc to Many Churches Where Easter Services Were Being Held.Several Killed and Many Injured—Pittsburg and Western Pennsylvania Experience Terrible Visitation—
Destruction at Various Places.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 31.—Devastation, loss of property, injuries and possibly death followed in the wake of a very disastrous wind storm that visited this section about noon yesterday. In the annals of Pittsburg it will be a historic Easter Sunday. Four persons were probably fatally injured, ten churches were more or less damaged, industrial plants suffered a great loss, one steamboat was capsized, houses were demolished and chimneys and cornices were blown down. The Phipps conservatory in Schenley Park, was visited and the old union bridge at that point was nearly demolished. This briefly tells the story of the big storm. It seemed to have its center in Pittsburg. While eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania seemed to be an easy mark, West Virginia came in for its share. According to a statement made at the office of the United States weather bureau, the storm was of local origin, and in the parlance of the weather man it was a "wind squall."

The sudden cooling of the temperature, which dropped from 62 to 43 degrees in a remarkably short time caused a vacuum which engendered a wind which in a very few minutes there was a gale blowing at the rate of 36 miles an hour. It was close to noon and this rate of speed was kept up for about five minutes when it gradually began to abate. Then it seemed to get a new life and at about 2:30 p. m. was blowing at the rate of 36 miles an hour, after which it finally subsided. One of the most remarkable features of the storm is the fact that so many churches fell prey to its force. St. Peter's Roman Catholic and Eighth street Temple, Pittsburg; African Methodist and Saint Wendel's Bohemian Roman Catholic of Allegheny; First English Lutheran and United Presbyterian of Braddock, Knoxville Presbyterian and St. Mary's Roman Catholic of McKees Rocks, all suffered more or less damage. It will take several days to determine the actual damage in dollars and cents in and about the greater Pittsburg.

CHURCH WRECKED

And Many People Injured at Pittsburg—Other Damage.

Pittsburg, March 31.—One of the fiercest windstorms ever known in this section struck here yesterday just before noon and did tremendous damage to property and injured many people, some of whom will die. Scores of houses were unroofed, many trees were blown down, mill stacks toppled over and telegraph and telephone wires generally disabled. The most serious accident reported as yet was the unroofing of the Knoxville Presbyterian church in Knoxville. The edifice was filled with an Easter congregation numbering about 600 persons. While the minister was in the midst of his sermon a particularly strong gust of wind blew over the large chimney and lifted a portion of the roof of the building. The bricks from the chimney crashed through the roof and carried a huge piece of the barrel wood ceiling, measuring about 40 by 20 feet down upon the people. A panic ensued and a rush was made for the doors and windows.

The excitement soon subsided and the work of rescue began. At least 40 persons were caught by the wreckage and more or less hurt.

Of this number five may not recover.

The towboat Belle McGowan was blown over in the Ohio river opposite Sawmill run and completely wrecked. Her crew narrowly escaped drowning.

but all were finally rescued by harbor boats.

James & Laughlins lost 14 of their furnace stacks. These were blown down, necessitating the closing of a portion of their plant for weeks.

Reports from nearby towns are slowly coming in, probably on account of the crippled condition of the wires. It is feared that much damage has been done in the country districts.

Minister Crushed in the Pulpit.

Greenville, Penn., March 31.—The solemn Easter services being held in the United Presbyterian church at Jamestown, this county, six miles north of Pittsburg, came to an abrupt ending at 12 o'clock today. The sky suddenly became overcast and a funnel-shaped cloud was seen approaching from the northwest. The tail tipped to the ground just before the church was reached. The congregation became uneasy, but the pastor Rev. J. M. Jamison, continued the services. All of a sudden there was a terrific crash and part of the south end of the church crashed in burying the minister beneath bricks and timbers. The men of the congregation rushed to the pulpit, and when the stricken minister was removed from the debris it was found he had received fatal injuries. His jaw was broken and the temporal bone crushed. The storm was the worst that has occurred in this section for years and it is thought that reports will come of great damage to the country districts.

Church Roof Fell Upon Worshippers.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 31.—The most serious damage from the terrific wind storm which visited West Virginia and Pennsylvania yesterday is reported from Franklin, east of Wellsburg, where all the telegraph wires are down shutting off communication with the outside world. The historic Methodist Episcopal church in the village is in ruins. Its venerable pastor is seriously injured, two members of the congregation are dead and others are badly wounded.

The Easter morning service was in progress and Rev. Mr. Allshouse had already completed his sermon on the resurrection when the sky suddenly darkened and the wind blew a terrific gale. Suddenly the gale end of the church was blown in, and the debris fell upon and all around the preacher. Several members of the congregation forgot their own danger and rushed to the assistance of the pastor, but the others fled precipitately from the structure. Then the roof was lifted off and dropped down among the people, crushing many of them under its weight.

Women were screaming or fainting and pandemonium reigned. Two persons were killed and many injured, while very few escaped. The casualty list:

Estella Brady, neck broken, died instantly.

Robert Gist, aged 10, head crushed died while being carried to his home, a few miles distant.

Rev. Allshouse, several gashes about the head, body bruised and cut.

Melvin Hervey, arm broken cuts about the head.

Russell Gist, wounded about the head and body seriously.

A complete list of those who sustained slight injuries would embarrass almost the entire congregation.

Other Church Destructions.

Pittsburg, March 31.—As Rev. I. W. English pastor of the Robinson Run Sawmill run and completely wrecked. Her crew narrowly escaped drowning.

eduction lightning struck the church spire and it toppled upon the roof, crushing it and injuring a number of worshippers, two of whom will die.

The injured are:

Robert Patterson, aged 10, skull fractured, will die.

Leon Averill, aged 11 years, skull fractured, will die.

Mrs. John Patterson, mother of Robert, severely lacerated and bruised about body.

Miss Mary G. Wallace, badly bruised.

Mrs. Mary Patterson, arm broken, and badly bruised.

Mrs. Averill, mother of Leon, head and arm cut and bruised.

The spire and part of the roof of the U. F. church at McDonald was torn off and the building considerably damaged, but no one was injured.

The Nobleston Presbyterian church was also unroofed, but the congregation escaped injury.

Splendid Indiana Church Destroyed.

Evansville, Ind., March 31.—Fire at an early hour yesterday completely destroyed the St. Boniface church on Wabash avenue.

About 1 o'clock a thunder storm came up and there was a fearful display of lightning. The rear end of the church was struck about 2 o'clock by a bolt, and a tiny blaze ran along the eave of the roof and ate its way from back to front. By 3 o'clock the entire interior was ablaze and the flames shot from the windows. An alarm was sounded and the department arrived promptly but was unable to save the edifice. The home of Rev. Father Burkhardt to the left of the church, was saved, but his fine library was ruined by water and smoke. When Father Burkhardt heard of the fire he fainted and for several hours was unconscious over the shock. The rich interior of the church including a costly altar, paintings, statuary etc., is a total loss.

St. Boniface church was commenced in 1878 and finished in 1881. The total cost was about $200,000. It is probably the largest and finest Catholic church in the state, south of Indianapolis. The congregation is composed of the wealthiest German people of the city. Hundreds of the old members visited the ruins and wept at having no place to worship on Easter morning. Only $10,000 insurance. The church will be rebuilt.

FORTY DEAD

Reported From Tennessee Points.—
Damage Enormous.

Nashville, Tenn., Mar. 31.—The loss of life in the Middle Tennessee and North Alabama flood is more terrible than previously reported, and it would not be at all surprising if the present victims will run over 40. With incomplete returns, 42 deaths were reported from the different water swept sections as follows:

Around Pulaski in Giles county, 12.
Lewisburg, 4.
Murfreesboro, 1.
Near Harriman, 2.
Middlesboro, Ky., 2.
Decatur, Ala., 2.
McMinnville, 5.
Florence, Ala., 7.

Early Sunday morning Will Adams, who resides 10 miles from Murfreesboro, was heard crying for help. Adams's house containing himself his wife and five children, floated away. And nothing has been heard of the family. Many houses and all the bridges in Rutherford county, save one county and one railroad bridge are wrecked.

Storm at Athens.

Athens, O., March 31.—One of the most destructive storms that has visited Athens for years occurred yesterday. The wind blew a gale and hail fell in great quantities. The storm was of short duration but during its visit a great amount of damage was done. Trees and fences were blown down, houses unroofed and awnings along Main street torn to pieces. Many windows in the public school buildings were broken. About one-half the roof of the new Hotel Athens was carried across Main street, and many private dwellings were damaged.

Probably the greatest loss was that of the Athens Journal. The roof of the composing room was torn completely off, the walls spreading asunder and the large printing presses damaged beyond repair. Once inside the building it took the character of a whirlwind and stove, desks, slabs, type

FUNERAL

OF THE NOTED HATFIELDS
AND OFFICERSWHO WERE KILLED IN THE QUAD-
RUPEL TRAGEDY.

HALF A DOZEN WINCHESTERS.

Carried in Hatfield Party Up the Mountain—Large Attendance at the Other Funerals.

Malewan, W. Va., March 31.—At 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon the bodies of Thompson Hatfield and his son, Eph, two of the participants in the quadruple tragedy of Saturday morning, were buried on a barren mountainside opposite here. As the little funeral party, numbering not more than 30, moved quietly up the steep mountain path that rises almost perpendicularly from the banks of the Tug river, directly opposite on the West Virginia side could be seen another funeral procession. It was that of John Rutherford, another victim of the tragedy, while 6 miles north near Williamson, just at that time, Harry Watts, the fourth victim of the tragedy was being consigned to mother earth.

It did not take a spy-glass, owing to the narrowness of the canyon of the Tug river to detect probably half a dozen Winchester being carried by the Hatfield funeral party. The ceremony at the grave of the two Hatfields was very brief. The funeral of Rutherford was one of the largest ever witnessed in the vicinity. He was a member of a number of secret societies and was very popular. It is said that the famous Captain Hatfield left his haunts in West Virginia and visited Kentucky to attend the funeral of his relatives, it being the first time "Cap" has set foot on Kentucky soil in eight or ten years. He has ten indictments against him in Pike county for murder, but no attempt was made to arrest him on that side.

"Devil Anse" also went across to the funeral, as well as several other members of his family.

FIRE

BROKE OUT IN THE HOLD ON AN OCEAN LINER.And For a Time Threatened the Vessel With Destruction—Passengers
Rescued in Safety.

New York, Mar. 31.—The Red Star liner Noordland, with 28 cabin and 19 steerage passengers, which she had taken off the burning Quebec line steamer Pretoria, 150 miles out at sea, reached port early this morning and docked the Pretoria line passengers at the American line pier. The Noordland then proceeded to Atawerp.

According to passengers the fire broke out at midnight Saturday night in the forward hold, which was filled with hay. The entire crew manned the pumps to fight the fire, which threatened to spread to the compartment just below, where was stored 187 barrels of petroleum. The passengers were ordered on deck, where they remained until morning, fearing an explosion might take place any minute. The wind blew a gale and fog prevented distress signals from being seen. Life boats were stacked with provisions and preparations made to leave the liner. The Noordland was finally sighted and signals were exchanged. Owing to the heavy sea the Noordland could not come nearer than half a mile, so the life boats were launched and the Pretoria's passengers transferred. Both steamships then stood for New York.

The Pretoria was beached this morning off Stapleton, L. I. The fire has been extinguished and wreckers are now engaged in pumping the water from the steamer's hold. The vessel will probably be floated later in the day. The damage is estimated, will not exceed $100,000.

Washington, March 31.—The house committee on ways and means by a vote of 12 to 5 ordered a favorable report on the Payne bill, providing reciprocity for Cuba.

JONES DEFEATED

Returns from the Arkansas Primaries
Show the Senator's Defeat by Gov. Clark.

Little Rock, Ark., March 31.—Senator Jones' defeat is now generally conceded. Sufficient returns have been received to insure Governor Clark's election by at least ten votes on joint ballot. These figures it is said will be increased when several counties in North Arkansas have been heard from. Several of Senator Jones' managers from the interior reached Little Rock last night and confirmed the reports of the senator's defeat in their localities.

PATRICK

THE CONVICTED NEW YORK
LAWYERWAS MARRIED IN THE TOMBS
PRISON YESTERDAY.

MILLIONAIRE RICE'S MURDERER

Makes a Sensational Chapter by Wedding a Widow—Authorities Had No Knowledge of Affair.

New York, March 31.—Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, convicted of killing Millionaire Wm. Marsh Rice, was married yesterday afternoon according to a morning paper, to Mrs. Addie M. Francis, a widow, in the Tombs prison without the knowledge of the authorities. The couple, it is stated took advantage of the new law, which provides for the legalization of marriage contracts filed with the city clerk within six months after the execution. The prison law permits a wife to see her husband two hours each day and it was for this object that the marriage was arranged.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Francis, her lawyer, Patrick's father, Miss Patrick and the prisoner's little daughter called at the Tombs and were taken to the matron's room. The attendants were told that they wanted to see Patrick for consultation. Despite the fact that a jailer was on guard to watch the proceedings, the contracts are said to have been signed. H. L. Patrick and Miss Emma Patrick were the witnesses. The signatures were written the story says, with a fountain pen so that no requests were made for pen and ink. The party then left the prison. Mrs. Patrick is about 40 years of age and has known her husband for about nine years. When Patrick became a widower he boarded at her house. Patrick refuses to discuss his marriage today.

TORTURED TO DEATH

SERIOUS CHARGE OF BRUTALITY
IN THE PHILIPPINES.Investigation Ordered by the War Department Into Cause of Private Richter's Death.

Washington, March 31.—The war department has ordered an investigation into the charges made by the Manila American, of Feb. 13, copies of which have just reached this city. The story alleges that private Edward Richter, 28th infantry, while a prisoner in the guard house at Dasmarinas, Cavite province, Luzon, was tortured to death by the lieutenant commanding the detachment. It is said that he was bound hand and foot and then several gallons of ice water were poured on his face, a drop at a time, that he struggled for a short time and then subsided, and that when the post surgeon examined him he was dead.

The story states that Richter was charged with some petty infraction of the army regulations and was awaiting trial.

The rotation of a water spout at the surface of the sea has been estimated by Professor Bielow as 254 miles an hour or nearly six miles a minute.

PENILESS

Ex-Gov. Altgeld Died—His Wife Would be in Want but For One Small Property.

Chicago, March 31.—John P. Altgeld died penniless. The reward of his life was a poverty so bitter that Mrs. Altgeld would be in want today did she not possess a small property in her own right. It is represented by the house in which she lives.

In the Unity block which for Altgeld held fortune, hope and sentiment, experts do not believe his estate retains an equity of a dollar's value. Two millions of dollars once rated as the Altgeld wealth is within the walls of the 17 story structure. Foreclosure proceedings, begun over two years ago, will reach the appellate court in the fall. The decree already has been entered in a lower court, but it was appealed. If the appellate court reiterates the judgment it is understood that the friends of the former governor will take the steps necessary for the final appeal to the State Supreme court. Then, if that tribunal declines to interfere the building will be sold and the Altgeld story will be closed.

RUSSIAN PURPOSE

Czar Sends Answer to American Inquiries as to His Intentions in Manchuria.

Vienna, March 31.—The "Allgemeine Zeitung" says it learns that in answering the American inquiries submitted to Count Lamdorff, minister of foreign affairs, the Czar himself replied that so long as sufficient guarantees for the maintenance of order in Manchuria were not forthcoming the Russian troops would not be withdrawn. Nevertheless, the principle of the open door would be maintained there as in the rest of China.

WENT OUT LIKE A LION.

The old saying "that if March comes in like a lamb, she will go out like a lion" was verified with a vengeance today. The oldest inhabitant says that while he has often seen March go out like a lion he never saw the last day of March so rough and blizzardy as today has been.

B. & O. EXPRESS
IN COLLISIONFour Persons Were Hurt and the Passengers Received a Thorough Shaking Up.

Connellsville, Pa., March 31.—Two wrecks formed the accident record last night of the Connellsville division of the B. & O. railroad. By good fortune none of the injuries resulting were serious, although it is almost a miracle for many lives were imperiled on a west bound express train.

The injured are:
Engineer Thomas Burton, of Glenwood, leg bruised and ankle broken; taken to his home.

Mrs. B. Grossman, of Pittsburg, bruised and severely shocked.

J. Hunter, mail clerk, Pittsburg, Pa.

J. H. Gates, mail clerk, Hyndman, Pa.

No. 9, the morning express, was running on time at 4:15 o'clock this morning. Fast freight No. 71 had stopped on a passing siding at Casselman to let the passenger pass, when another freight came along and 71 pulled out to let the other in on the siding. Happily had she done so when the express flashed around a curve.

In the fog headlights could not be seen for any distance.

The engineers, Burton, of the passenger and Flummer of the freight, both jumped as did the firemen. The engines clashed head on and were almost demolished.

The passengers were badly shaken up and many of them badly bruised, but none of the injuries are considered serious. The wreck was cleared in four hours and the express went through with a new engine.

At Confluence, 11 miles west of Casselman B. & O. engine No. 471 side-wiped the hauler of a freight, damaging both engines badly and delaying traffic for some time. Then engineers and firemen jumped and no one was injured.

EVANS

PENSION COMMISSIONER TO BE PROMOTED.PRESIDENT TO APPOINT HIM MIN-ISTER TO CUBA.

NO CHANGE IN PENSION POLICY.

Roosevelt Approves the Course Evans
Has Pursued—His Successor
Must be Like Him.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Commissioner of Pensions H. Clay Evans will leave his present office next month, and President Roosevelt, who wishes to keep him in the Government service, this evening offered him the post of Minister to Cuba.

Mr. Evans' successor as Commissioner of Pensions has not yet been selected, but he will be a strong man of like character and who will pursue the same policy as Commissioner Evans.

President Roosevelt desires to have it distinctly understood as he said to Eli Torrence, commander in chief of the G. A. R., that Mr. Evans will retire voluntarily; that he would not think of removing Mr. Evans, but on the contrary proposes to give him an appointment which will evidence his approval of the course which Mr. Evans has followed. Moreover, he told General Torrence that the successor of Mr. Evans would be a similar man, whom he would instruct to follow in the footsteps of Mr. Evans in his administration of the Pension office.

The demand from some of the G. A. R. for the removal of Commissioner Evans would not be granted by President Roosevelt. Shortly after Mr. Roosevelt became President, Commissioner Evans told him that his resignation would be forthcoming whenever it was desired. The President told Commissioner Evans that he wanted him to remain right where he was and that he heartily approved the course pursued by Mr. Evans in office.

In January last Mr. Evans saw the President again and said he would be glad to retire in April, when he would complete five years of service, which would be longer than the service of any of his predecessors. This was, of course, before the G. A. R. brought a demand to President Roosevelt for the retirement of Commissioner Evans.

President Roosevelt told him that if he desired to retire he would be very glad to mark his approval of Mr. Evans' course by giving him an important diplomatic post which everybody would recognize as a promotion. It was with this object in mind that the President tendered him the post of first minister to Cuba. Commissioner Evans has the offer under advisement and it is generally believed that he will accept.

The proffer was made with the assurance that just as soon as a more prominent diplomatic post was made available the Commissioner would be transferred. It is the understanding that the Mexican mission would be in the course of a few months become vacant, and it is almost certain that Mr. Evans will receive that billet.

The President regards the post of Minister to Cuba an important one, inasmuch as the relation of the future republic with this country will be shaped under his service. The place will carry with it a salary of $10,000 a year, with additional allowance for a Legation and its maintenance. The place will become available on May 20 when the Cuban flag will be raised. Congress is expected to appropriate the money for a United States Legation and Consular Service for Cuba very soon.

HANNA

Seeking to Have Rathbone, Convicted of Cuban Postal Frauds, Admitted to Bail.

Washington, March 31.—Hanna is looking to have Rathbone admitted to bail pending his appeal to the supreme court of Cuba from his conviction for postal frauds in Havana and an application has been made to the war department that steps be taken to have the authorities of the island name the amount of the bond.

A CASE OF IDENTITY

(Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.)

The postmaster at Clayton for the time I write of and for two years previously was a single man, thirty-five years old, named Henry Day. He made his home with a widow named Martin, who had three children. As postmaster he was known to every man, woman and child for five miles around, and you would say that his identity could be proved above any other man's. One morning Day was missing, and within an hour the widow startled the community by charging him with attempted assault and robbery. Her statement was to the effect that she had been awakened about midnight and found him in her room. She had that day received $2,000 in cash, and he demanded the money. When she cried out, he struck her with a club, and during the few minutes she was unconscious he secured the money and fled.

Did any one doubt her story? Was there the slightest reason to suspect she could be mistaken? She had seen him and heard his voice. So also had Frank and Lattie as he left the house. He had taken a freight train which passed the station at 1 o'clock a. m., and the station agent had even spoken to him. As he was the only passenger, the conductor and two brakemen could fully identify him. Was there ever a plainer case?

It was three weeks before Mr. Day was overhauled and brought back for trial. He was not even frustrated. He calmly denied that he was Henry Day. He denied that he had ever been in Clayton. Indeed he was so cool and nifty that the officers, who knew him as well as they knew their own children, began to doubt if he were really the man before they started back.

The prisoner declared the officers mistaken, but made no objection to returning with them. There were 500 people at the depot to see him. Every one recognized him as Henry Day. Next day he was arraigned before a justice of the peace under that name. He denied it and gave his name as James Bailey. His plea was "not guilty," and he had the best lawyers in the county. The doubt which the officers brought back with them now began to bear fruit. When Mrs. Martin took the stand, she positively identified the prisoner as Day. On cross examination she began to waver. One of her children swore positively; another "thought so." A clerk in the post-office was put on the stand to identify the prisoner. He was positive at first, but ended by doubting. Only two young persons out of thirty called to the stand were positive. The defense claimed a case of mistaken identity. The prisoner declared his name to be James Bailey and that he was born of American parents in Switzerland. He had come to the United States as a tourist and had only been in the country two weeks when arrested. He had about $1,000 in money, some of which was English gold.

When the trial in the higher court came on, the crew of the freight train and the station agent were put on the stand. Each set out to be positive, but each ended by doubting. The testimony of the station agent was a fair sample:

"Mr. Jones, you were acquainted with Henry Day?"

"Yes, sir."

"What sort of nose had he?"

"None? Why, a straight nose, sir?"

"Sure of this?"

"Yes, sir."

"That will do."

The prisoner, in the box had a Roman nose. Did Day have that sort of nose? One half the village said yes, the other half no. The Widow Martin was determined to be positive this time. She not only believed in what she was going to swear to, but a hundred different people had encouraged her in her conviction. This was the way she came to grief:

"You think it was about midnight when you awoke?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what did you see?"

"I saw the prisoner at the foot of the bed and called out."

"Did you know who it was before you heard his voice?"

"No, sir."

"Well, what did he say?"

"He said, 'I want that money or I'll murder you.'"

"You were greatly frightened?"

"Yes, sir."

"And yet, frightened as you were, you recognized his voice?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, let us see if there is any similarity. Prisoner, you will call out the words used by the man in the bedroom."

The prisoner complied, seeming to put himself in the other's place, and his words knocked the bottom out of the prosecution. The Widow Martin seemed stupefied as she looked at him.

"So you swear that this is the voice you heard in your bedroom, do you?" asked the lawyer.

"I-I can't say."

Of the two men who had been positive at the preliminary examination one backed square down, while the other was full of doubts. When the case was closed and the jury went out, eight were doubtful and the other four not very positive, and the result was a verdict of "not guilty." Bailey remained in town for a couple of weeks, meeting everybody as a stranger and wandering around to see the sights, and then went quietly away, to be seen no more. Was he Bailey or Day? I have told you how they failed to prove he was anybody but Bailey, and yet he was Day. Years afterward I interviewed him in a South Carolina jail for two days before he was to be tried for burglary, and he acknowledged his identity and laughed heartily over the details of the case.

RAILWAY AFFAIRS.

BALTIMORE &amp; OHIO OFFICIALS VISIT ZANESVILLE.

More B. & O. Changes—Electric Lights for the Penny—Local Railway Briefs.

More B. & O. Changes.
W. B. Hanlon, division engineer of the B. & O. at New Castle, retires from that position on the first prox., after which time he will have charge of the purchasing and distribution of fuel for the entire B. & O. system.

J. B. Carothers has been appointed division engineer of the Baltimore and Southwestern at Chillicothe, succeeding J. G. Bloom who goes with the B. & O. as division engineer of the New Castle division. Earl Stinson succeeds Mr. Carothers as division engineer of the Springfield division of the B. & O. S. W. at Flora, Ill. The changes are effective April 1.

Electric Lights for the Penny.
The use of lamps or gas for lighting purposes on the passenger coaches of the Pennsylvania lines west and east of Pittsburgh will shortly be a thing of the past. Orders were issued after an inspection which lasted several nights at Pittsburgh by a large assemblage of railroad men for certain changes in the storage battery electric lighting system recently installed on the Pennsylvania line. It was decided to gradually abandon entirely the use of lamps or gas in all the cars not only those building, but to be built, and those that are being renewed and repaired will be equipped with the storage batteries. The company has had seven cars equipped with the batteries or their lines for some time testing the efficiency of the system. One other car in which acetylene gas was used for lighting purposes was also placed with the others for the sake of comparison, and it more fully demonstrated the efficiency of the electric system. The superiority of the electric system did not take long to determine but the details of management to secure the best service were the subjects under discussion. An arrangement was also investigated by which separate circuits were used to enable partial lighting for tunnel purposes.

Rumors at Zanesville.
All the oft-repeated rumors concerning the disposition of the B. & O. K. railroad were revived Saturday morning by a visit of a party of L. & O. officials to this city. In the party were general freight agent Brockenbrough of Pittsburgh, District Freight Agent Constans of Columbus and Superintendent Batchelder of Newark. Mr. Brockenbrough was accompanied by his private secretary. Accompanied by Local Freight Agent Richards of the B. & O. officials inspected the yards. B. & O. & M. V. depots and yards. No definite information concerning the object of the visit was given out, but the construction of additional switches in the B. & O. yards in the Eighth ward for the accommodation of the O. & L. K. trains lends color to the report that O. & L. K. business is to be handled at the B. & O. depot instead of the C. & M. V. Now that the C. & M. V. and the B. & O. are both under control of the Pennsylvania, rumors of the erection of a Union depot are not flouted as they were not long since. A railroad man who visited the east some time ago stated that he had seen the plans for a Union depot for Zanesville in the B. & O. offices at Baltimore. Zanesville Courier.

e. c., were all bunched together in a complete mass. Twenty-five thousand election tickets for Athens county, which had just been run off the press, were ruined.

Storm at Wheeling.
Wheeling, W. Va., March 31.—The wind unroofed half a dozen big industrial establishments, necessitating idleness until repairs are made. At McMechen there was a panic in one of the immense ore breakers of the steel mill were blown down and the mill will be idle while the financial loss will amount to $10,000.

Destruction at Toledo.
Toledo, O., March 31.—A furious gale swept this section all day yesterday. The wind attained the velocity of 70 miles an hour. Street signs were blown down, chimneys toppled over, and the water in the river was lowered 10 feet. Two houses in process of construction were blown down. Reports of great damage came in from the adjoining country. Telegraph and telephone wires were blown down everywhere and extra linemen are at work to restore them.

Macedonians, Encouraged by the Payment of Stone Ransom, Threaten to Revolt Against Turkey.

Constantinople, March 31.—It is learned from the highest sources that the Macedonia revolutionists, encouraged by a visit of a party of L. & O. officials to this city. In the party were general freight agent Brockenbrough of Pittsburgh, District Freight Agent Constans of Columbus and Superintendent Batchelder of Newark. Mr. Brockenbrough was accompanied by his private secretary. Accompanied by Local Freight Agent Richards of the B. & O. officials inspected the yards. B. & O. & M. V. depots and yards. No definite information concerning the object of the visit was given out, but the construction of additional switches in the B. & O. yards in the Eighth ward for the accommodation of the O. & L. K. trains lends color to the report that O. & L. K. business is to be handled at the B. & O. depot instead of the C. & M. V. Now that the C. & M. V. and the B. & O. are both under control of the Pennsylvania, rumors of the erection of a Union depot are not flouted as they were not long since. A railroad man who visited the east some time ago stated that he had seen the plans for a Union depot for Zanesville in the B. & O. offices at Baltimore. Zanesville Courier.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

The Mikado in Public.
Mutsuhito is the first Japanese sovereign to emerge from the dignified retirement in which his predecessors lived. This step has only increased the passionate loyalty of his subjects toward him, and people are already comparing him with the Kaiser as regards the prominent public role he seems disposed to play.

During the army maneuvers some weeks ago his majesty, who followed events with the greatest interest and enthusiasm, ordered two privates to be brought before him and questioned them through the medium of his chief aide-de-camp. His questions were of the paternal kind.

The young soldiers answered that they were quite happy in the army and that their only desire was to do their duty toward their beloved sovereign.

A few days before the mikado while traveling by rail was cheered by a number of very old people at Shiraishi station. He sent them all presents through the local governor, an act of kindness which moved the old people to tears of gratitude.

A Prince's News Letter.
The following anecdote illustrates the present Prince of Wales' decided objection to lengthy letter writing. Before he sailed for his Australian tour on the Ophir he promised a friend that he would from time to time send him a long, newsy letter relating all the features of the voyage. Many weeks after the distinguished party had set sail and after the prince had been on Australian soil some time the friend received the following "long, newsy letter":

Dear —: I promised you a long, chaty letter, didn't I? Well, now for it. Everything goes famously. Grand country, Australia! Fine scenery, great hospitality. Good time everywhere and as happy as a duke on show" could wish to be. Will write you another long letter soon. Ever yours, GEORGE.

A Banker Fisherman.
Fifth Avenue church parade garb and patent leather shoes are hardly suited to a shore casting striped bass fisherman, but Giovanni P. Mososini, banker, society man and son of the financier of that name, who was one of General Garibaldi's intimate friends, sometimes affects such a "rig." Mr. Mososini, who lives with his father at Riverdale, has been called the king of the North River fishermen. He has of been "high rod" of the season with bass over twenty pounds, and his outfits are the most costly that can be obtained. He always has several worth from $100 to $150 each. Mr. Mososini as a fisherman ignores class distinctions and is generous almost to a fault. In several instances he has taken a fancy to a chum in humble life and fitted him out with one of his sets of fishing paraphernalia, going the next day to his tackle dealer to replace it.

Wolsley Sent to the Front.
The most important move made by the British war office recently was the sending of Lord Wolsley to South Africa the other day. The full meaning of this step will not be known until

LORD WOLSELEY.

Wolsley arrives at the seat of war and has a meeting with Kitchener, but the air will be full of all sorts of rumors until that time arrives.

Lord Wolsley is one of Great Britain's most famous military men and was commander in chief of the army from 1895 to 1900. In the latter year he retired and was succeeded by Lord Roberts.

Lyman Abbott's Anniversary.
Rev. Lyman Abbott recently completed the twenty-fifth year of his connection with the editorial department of The Outlook. There was an informal reception at the offices of the publication in New York in honor of the event.

NEWARK

AHEAD OF ZANESVILLE IN PROSPERITY AND GROWTH.

More Buildings, Ten to One, Erected in Newark Last Season Than in Zanesville.

Newark has caught the reflex of Zanesville's building boom and is about to have a five story office building on the square. Henry S. Fleck, well known jobber, will erect the structure and the site is the Metz property.—Zanesville Times Recorder.

Our cotemporary on the banks of the Muskingum waxeth amusing in the above when saying that Newark has caught the "reflex" of the Clay City's building boom.

Newark's building growth has been in progress for a sufficient length of time to be taken out of the "boom" category, and the building of the business block on North Park Place by Mr. Fleck and associates, is only an item in the general progress that has been noticed and felt by our citizens, as well as the "stranger within our gates."

A traveling representative of one of the biggest lumber houses in the United States, than whom, as a class, there are no better judges of the prosperity of a town, as judged from the building material sold, said to Mr. W. H. Smith, of the P. Smith's Sons lumber company not long ago, in the presence of a reporter for this paper, that Newark was doing more building, than any town of Ohio its size. "And," he continued, "as a matter of fact, Newark is putting up ten houses to Zanesville's one."

This man knew what he was talking about, as he called on every retail lumberman in Newark and Zanesville, and showed his order book to prove his statement.

We are glad that Zanesville has arisen, Phoenix-like, from the lethargy that has for the past 10 years marked her industrial and fiscal existence, but Newark does not outshine over one of her provinces, in the exuberance of joy over a new born "boom" speaking of Newark's progress being a "reflex" of this "infant industry."

Newark has passed Zanesville in growth, progress and prosperity, and the Muskingum county capital compared with the Licking metropolis, must "go 'way back and sit down."

Do not think for a moment that the inconspicuous and distressing ailment is to dyspepsia. The disagreeable symptoms of dyspepsia are of the least account because the health reports of not less dyspepsia as a disease, people seem to think it is more disagreeable than dangerous, but the reverse is true. Some other disease, as consumption or typhoid fever, is eroded with the fatal illness, but dyspepsia made these diseases possible.

Impaired digestion is responsible for a state of chronic starvation, the half fed dyspeptic possesses little power of resistance and were an easy prey to the germs of consumption.

Impaired digestion permitted germs in swallowed food and water to get through the stomach, where they should have been killed and destroyed by the powerful gastric juice, and enter the blood stream, the result of which they thrive and multiply, and to phlog (inflammation) of the blood, the result of which is a state of chronic starvation, the half fed dyspeptic possesses little power of resistance and were an easy prey to the germs of consumption.

EASTER JOY

SUBJECT OF SUNDAY'S SERMON
AT PLYMOUTH CHURCH.

Text of the Discourse Sunday Morning
by Rev. T. M. Higginbotham at Congregational Church.

The following, Easter sermon was preached Sunday at the Plymouth Congregational church by the Rev. T. M. Higginbotham:

Matt. 28: 8.—"And they departed quickly from the sepulcher with praise and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word."

The picture of our text is a part of the panorama of the first Easter day. That first Easter day was crowded full of startling events which followed each other in quick succession. The struggle which apparently ceased on Calvary was renewed with the accumulative force of past achievements, inspired by a new courage and enthusiasm. It is the struggle of the ages which shall never cease until humanity is redeemed and sin is destroyed. The experience of the women was typical of the state of mind of all the disciples to whom Jesus appeared on that day from early dawn to even-tide. How different the state of mind from that of the previous day. Out of the sorrows, despair and darkness of yesterday has come the light and joy of the New Easter hope. The resurrection of Christ was an a priori necessity. It was necessary to satisfy reason. Human reason demands immortality as a logical conclusion to personality and being. Life would be an enigma indeed without the doctrine, but with it life has purpose and meaning and reason is satisfied.

Again, the resurrection is necessary to fulfill the highest aspirations and hopes of the human heart. The soul aspires to a future life, it is conscious of having the power of an endless life within. The resurrection makes this soul aspiration a proper expectation and reality. Without the fact of immortality such a hope would be a mockery.

Again, the resurrection is necessary to complete the system of Christian truth. The resurrection of Christ includes all other great events of His life. There must have been death before resurrection, life before death, and birth before life. An arch without the key-stone would fall to pieces; Jesus whole system of teaching would have lacked the element of completeness without it. This truth adds power, beauty and symmetry to the whole fabric. Science and philosophy have endeavored to find some plausible explanation of the resurrection. Some have taken Jesus resurrection as typical and as an explanation so they have concluded that every resurrection is a literal revitalizing of the identical body. That every human body whether burned to a heap of ashes or dissolved by other elements is reconstructed out of the identical particles of the old into a new body.

Others take Saul's words of I. Cor. 15: 38. "But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him and to every seed his own body," as containing the truth. Such believe that God who clothed the spirit with an appropriate body for this world will clothe it with a suitable body for its new and heavenly environment. And then there are others who find in the process of nature an analogy of the death and resurrection of the human body. As the seed or the bulb decays when buried in the earth and out of this death there comes a new and different life, so out of the dead body which is buried there arises the new life of the spirit which has been forming within during the earthly life. This last theory is quite in keeping with the theory of evolution which is so widely accepted. The dominant note of Easter time is Joy. The song is one of Triumph.

This joy of the women and the apostles was preceded by a period of pain, of despair and sorrow. On Jesus part it was preceded by the agony of Gethsemane, the suffering of the trial and the sacrifice of Calvary. All true joy is the sequence of struggle for the right, sorrow for sin, or sacrifice for Christ and others.

In the first place the joy of Easter is the joy of a New Discovery.

A new world was discovered in the light and revelation of the first Easter day. This new world is one of infinite beauty and possibility. The soul's vision and horizon now includes the eternity beyond. It is pitiful and painful to the modern Christian to follow the ancient mind as it struggles in the glimmering light of the time for this new truth of immortality. This era of the soul from the darkness of the past was answered by the message of Easter. The earth and sea have hidden in their bowens treasures of great beauty and richness. The men who have discovered these treasures have experienced a thrill of joy. The seeker after these has suffered and toiled weary months and years and, after repeated disappointments has found the object of his search to sit down and cry for very joy. The discoveries in the field of science and invention have multiplied the earthly joy of millions. But those who have made these discoveries have realized the greatest joy. When Newton discovered the law of gravitation; when Columbus discovered the new continent; when Watt discovered the power and use of steam; when Marconi discovered wireless telegraphy, a wave of joy began in their hearts which grew to be world-wide. The joy of the discovering in the realm of spiritual truth is of a deeper and more permanent kind. It sets in tune the whole inner being which vibrates in harmony with the heavenly music. The disciples did not at once realize the full meaning and the wider sweep of this new-found truth. They rejoiced in the discovery of their lost Saviour and Lord but it gradually grew upon them that Jesus' resurrection was a pledge and seal of their own resurrection and eternal life. Ancient mariners sailed the Mediterranean and its surrounding coasts. Supposing they had reached the utmost boundaries of the earth they inscribed on the pillars of Hercules the motto "Ne plus ultra"—nothing beyond. But as the years of God go by he sends ships far through the unknown waters and reveals a great new world all radiant with the tropical verdure and boundless resources of wealth. So in the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ, God has discovered to man a great new world of life and light and love to which man, the sinner, can migrate and escape the blight and death and doom of sin and dwell with God and holy angels while eternal cycles roll.

In the second place, the Easter joy is the joy of a New-born Hope.

The Jewish people were a people with a great hope. This hope had been the guiding star and the incentive of their national, civil and religious progress. The prophets had again and again, thrilled the heart of the nation with the declaration of this hope. The poets had inspired all by building into verse and singing it in music. The common people cherished it with the tenacity and fervor of the Jewish heart. It was the hope of a coming Saviour who should redeem Israel. The apostles and many others believed Jesus to be the fulfillment of that long cherished hope. But with the death of Christ this hope was dashed to pieces and buried with Him in the new rock-hewn tomb of Joseph's garden. The resurrection of Christ was a revival and fulfillment of the lost hope. This is the mainspring of righteous action, the guide and stay of life. It is the motive for endurance and perseverance. This hope is anchored in the eternal unseen Universe. The invisible world is brought within the consciousness of the soul and it becomes a real part of its possession. Every pious heart expects to come into full possession and enjoyment of this new life and home through the resurrection. It is said that some one told Queen Victoria when she was but a small girl that she was in the direct line of the throne and some day she would be queen. This expectation had a wholesome influence upon her life. She watched every detail of her conduct. She trained herself in the manners of the court. She cultivated grace of movement and a pleasing personal presence. This preparation was made with reference to the life of the future. John says in his first Epistle the third verse and third chapter: "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." Such a hope will be of practical and abiding influence. Those with such a lively hope will live with reference to the future. If we are to be sons and priests of God out in the eternity, let us live lives worthy of our high calling here.

Easter day anticipates a still brighter and more perfect day to come. Let our hearts be full of brightness and joy. And as with renewed consecration we go on in this way of duty and of right doing the risen Christ will walk with us illuminating our pathway with radiance and blessing.

In the third place, the Easter Joy is the Joy of Victory.

The resurrection of Christ was the greatest victory recorded in the annals of history. He conquered the last enemy—death.

Christ has proven himself invincible. With him even defeat is eternal victory. What courage is here afforded for all Christian service. Allied with Christ we are allied with a victory. Napoleon used to say that every battle had its pivot-point on which the conflict turned toward victory or defeat. However long the fight might wage after that moment the result was certain. The battle would end as the pivot-moment indicated. In the conflict Christ has undertaken for us the pivot-moment was the resurrection. The balance swung there toward victory. The struggle may be long but the Risen One will conquer. Under His feet at last His enemies shall lie. And we are one with the Victor, trusting and serving Him. How it makes the heart glow, this truth! It is a great thing to be upon the certain victor's side; and we may every one of us be on that side if we will and so have a shining share in the illimitable triumph.

The disciples as they appeared on the death side of the cross give us a good picture of defeat, they are despairing and cowardly ghostly memories of His life are vividly before them. But on the resurrection side of the cross the picture changes to one of victory. The disciples are full of courage, confidence and joy.

In the strength of this new joy they are ready to face a hostile world with the sense of certain victory. It is the joy of a new-found Saviour that makes the church a conquering force. This element of joy ought to enter more largely into all our worship and service. It would commend our religion to the world, a glad religion is a contagious religion. All nature around us is awakening from sleep into new life. Let every heart rejoice in this Easter morn. Let the discouraged take fresh courage. The doubt take firmer faith. The sorrowing dry their tears for Jesus is King.

Let us look up, too, at this glad time to the heavens where He is seated at the right hand of the Father wielding the destinies of the universe to subserve His object. Let us try to drink in, in larger measure than ever before something of the spirit of our Divine Master; something of that reverence for God which led Him at such sacrifice to do His Father's will; something of that love for our fellow: which actuated Him, and which shall lead us to be unselfish, loving and self-sacrificing toward them on our part. Thus shall we be doing the will of God making ourselves co-workers with Him and in the great over-world we shall share in the joy and glory of our risen Lord. Let us run quickly to all the world with the glad news that Christ liveth evermore. There is no time to waste. It will be too late for some if we delay.

Some fellow's only idea of a good time is to have a headache next day.

ASTER comes in the springtime burst of plant growth, when both cultivated park and woodland glen invite our attention anew to the marvels of the floral world. Our old pagan ancestors were as observant of these phenomena as we are, and at about the date upon which we celebrate the resurrection they held a joyful festival in honor of the deity who personified the opening of the spring. The early church, with its habit of adopting as many of the popular religious rites as possible into the new faith, found it an easy matter to transform the feast of the earth's awakening from the sleep of winter to the rejoicing that Christ should initiate the resurrection of the souls of men from the sleep of the grave.

Before the Christian era throughout Europe blossoms bore the names of the pagan deities, but with the revolution of religious ideas the plants had to be rechristened and the legends attached to them reconstructed to conform to the new faith.

Perhaps from a feeling of reverence but few were named for Christ or any member of the trinity. We still have Christ's thorn, which is supposed to have furnished the material for the crown of torture. Upon the Saviour's mother a wealth of flowers were bestowed. The plants coming to us with the prefix "lady," as lady's slipper and lady's tresses, were "Our Lady's" before abbreviated by time. Our Lady's thistle received its name from a legend connected with the flight of the holy family from Bethlehem. As Mary nursed the infant by the roadside a few drops of milk fell on a plant at her feet, and the leaves retain to this day the vouchers for the story. The virgin's bower, marigold, maiden's hair and all like titles were originally named for the Virgin Mary.

THE ANGEL GAVE ABEL THREE SEEDS.

The fritillaria, or checkered lily, before the crucifixion was pure white, with upturned cup. It stood proudly erect during the suffering until darkness enshrouded the earth, and it saw that all nature but itself was grieving. Then it bent low its head and donned garments of mourning and began to weep. Still it hangs its head in somber attire and still each petal sheds a pearly tear.

The veronica gets its name from a resemblance to the imprint of Christ's features left on St. Veronica's handkerchief when she pressed from out the throng and wiped the perspiration from the Redeemer's brow.

It has never been decided what tree or trees furnished wood for the cross. Bede says the cypress, the cedar, the pine and the box, but St. Chrysostom quotes from Isaiah 53: 13. "The glory of Lebanon (cedar) shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree and the box together to beautify the place of thy sanctuary." The four woods are considered symbolic of the four quarters of the globe over which the influence of the cross shall finally extend. There is an old English legend carrying the cross back to the days of our first parents. Adam sent Abel to an angel to petition him to show them the path back to the garden of Eden. The angel gave Abel three seeds and directed him to plant them, saying that from their trunks would spring the path to paradise. The seeds were planted, and one tree at least was flourishing at the time Solomon erected his temple. This tree was cut down to furnish a ridge pole, but after it was brought in it was found to be too short. Then it was cast aside and lay waste by the pool of Bethesda until it was taken to form the cross, which, according to Christianity, will guide us to the paradise lost to us by the weakness of the first man.

ASK FOR THEM.

AY HARTLEY was fond of saying that she was "not like other girls," and Harry Deane agreed with her entirely. Indeed, he went much further in his belief that she did, for she meant that her usual way of doing things was a different, while he not only thought that, but thought she differed greatly in being more beautiful and lovable and harder to propose to than other girls. She didn't follow up any of the usual leads that are so likely to bring up the momentous question naturally when young people are together. On the contrary, she seemed to resist several sentences ahead when he was going to stammer out when he had made up his mind to propose and never failed to change the subject skillfully. Of course this only made him the more eager to have his face settled.

When Harry came home from the city for his Easter holiday, it was with a grim determination to go back as an engaged man or know the reason why. He knew that he would have to do something clever in the way of proposing, and, as he had studied the matter carefully since Christmas, he felt sure that his plan was one that would surely succeed. But in coming to that conclusion he overlooked the mo-

"HERE'S MY PART OF THE SPREAD," meant the well known fact that she was not like other girls and that the best laid eggs as well as the best laid plans "rang off a peg."

They had spent Easter eve together, and the time had come when he should take his leave if he did not wish to break the Sabbath. But as he stirred in if about to go May said:

"I have a cake of my own making that I want you to try before you go." This was exactly the opening he had been waiting for all evening.

"Thank you," he said. "And I have something of my own cooking that I want you to try."

"Something of your own cooking?" he asked, opening her brown eyes very wide.

"Exactly, and I hope you will enjoy it."

"What is it? Candy?"

"I didn't know candy was cooked. I thought it was just made."

"How witty you have become since you went to the city!" she retorted, with a mock bow.

"Oh, you have no idea," he replied calmly. "Now you go and get your cake, and when you come back I'll have my spread ready."

May left the room, wondering what her father was coming. Of course she expected a present or souvenir of some kind from him after he had been corresponding with her for some time as an affectionate uncle as she would allow.

After she had left the room Harry slipped out into the hall and took a little package from his overcoat pocket. He placed it on the table after unlatching the cord with which it was tied and waited for May. She returned presently with a plate of cake and a tray bearing steaming cups of coffee.

"Here is my part of the spread," she said, "and if you don't like it I am afraid there will be trouble."

"And here is mine," he said as he opened the box toward her.

May opened the box with as much curiosity as might be expected from an ordinary girl. She found a golden egg carefully packed in batting.

"Why," she exclaimed, "I thought this goose that laid the golden egg was killed long ago!"

"No it was, but this one was laid by an old American hen especially for your Easter celebration."

"Oh, and there is poetry on it too! I am afraid that is more than I can swallow."

"Will 'show the giver's mind.' Does that mean that the egg is not more than half baked?"

"It isn't baked at all; it's boiled," he answered testily.

"That means that it has been in hot water. Does it follow that you are likely to get into hot water too?"

"I trust not," he replied fervently. "But, say, this cake of yours is simply delicious."

"I suppose when I eat this egg I'll have to compliment it too. But, come to think of it, an egg is something that one should always take with a grain of salt."

"Not this one," he said eagerly. "This is an exceptional egg."

"Well, I'll have it for breakfast and see if it is gold all the way through."

"Oh, it is better than gold!"

"Better? And it is going to show your mind, so the poem says. Dear, dear, I never thought you had such a wonderful mind!"

"Now you are purposely misunderstanding me."

"On the contrary, I am not understanding you at all."

"I wish I could make you understand me, Miss Hartley."

"Why do you find me so stupid that I can't understand?"

"No! I simply find you too clever to let me see whether you understand or not. But don't save the egg for breakfast. Perhaps you wouldn't care to open it at the table with the children."

"Why shouldn't I care to open a golden egg if it's real gold? I am afraid it is only plated!" she exclaimed, noticing a spot where the gold leaf was rubbing loose.

"I wish you would open it now," said Harry.

His persistence was just exactly what would naturally keep May from opening the egg to please him, but it must be admitted that her curiosity was very thoroughly aroused. Besides, he somehow seemed different from what he used to be before going to the city, and she was beginning to feel a misgiving that she might tease him altogether too much. Finally she decided that she would satisfy him and her own curiosity by opening the Easter egg.

Taking the cake knife in her hand, she took one more critical look at the egg and then exclaimed:

"Oh, I wish you had put the poetry at the other end of the egg, for I would like to save this wonderful shell! But now I'll have to spoil the verses while opening it."

"Why, no," he protested. "I put the verses near the big end so that you wouldn't have to spoil them."

"But how could I open the egg without spoiling them?"

"By opening it at the little end, as everybody else does."

"At the little end! I never opened an egg at the little end in my life."

"Well, it isn't too late for you to begin now."

"It is entirely too late when I know better. Everybody knows that the big end is the only end to open an egg at. If you open that end, you have room to get your spoon in."

"Spoon nonsense. You would think that one ate eggs with a tablespoon to hear you talk."

"Well, one would think you had never eaten eggs at all," she retorted, "when you don't know which end to open."

"But I do know at which end to open them, and that is why I fixed that one as I did. My mother taught me as a child to open my egg at the little end, and I have never forgotten it."

THE EGG FELL TO THE FLOOR WITH A CRASH.

"If it had been sensible, you would have forgotten it, but I want you to know that my mother taught me to open them at the big end, and it just makes me sick to see any one open an egg at the little end. That's the end (that the yolk is in, and you are always in danger of cutting too deep and mashing things up."

"Mr.," he said, with an attempt at being sarcastic. "How well you know the anatomy of an egg!"

"Well," she answered hotly, "I know the anatomy of eggs so well that I have no further desire to investigate the contents of this one, even if it does show the giver's mind." And she replaced it on the table.

"Oh, well, I'm sure I'll not insist," said Harry, "and I suppose you can afford to get sarcastic about the giver's mind. You don't appear to have enough of your own to enable you to open an egg properly." As he said this he rose angrily. Now, you need not be surprised that these young people were so foolish as to quarrel about the proper way of opening an egg. We can all remember how carefully the historians of the Lilliputians have recorded the events of the cruel war that raged between the big Endians and the little Endians.

THE EGG FELL TO THE FLOOR WITH A CRASH.

"If it had been sensible, you would have forgotten it, but I want you to know that my mother taught me to open them at the big end, and it just makes me sick to see any one open an egg at the little end. That's the end (that the yolk is in, and you are always in danger of cutting too deep and mashing things up."

"Mr.," he said, with an attempt at being sarcastic. "How well you know the anatomy of an egg!"

"Well," she answered hotly, "I know the anatomy of eggs so well that I have no further desire to investigate the contents of this one, even if it does show the giver's mind." And she replaced it on the table.

A lover's feelings are more soft and sensitive. That are the tender horns of cockled snails.

So it is no wonder that their tender feelings were wounded by this ruse.

As Harry rose angrily from the table he accidentally struck against it in such a way that the golden egg, which May had put down, started to roll toward the edge, and before either of them noticed what was happening it fell to the floor with a crash. As it did so it burst asunder, and something bounced out that could not help attracting attention. As it rolled off into a corner every turn threw out sparks of prismatic light. May uttered an involuntary "Oh!" as soon as she saw what the egg had contained, and forgetting all about her anger, her face flushed with surprise and pleasure.

Glancing up at her from the wreck of the egg, Harry saw the change of expression on her face, and the absurdity of his anger came over him like a flash. He began to laugh and, stepping across the room, picked up the engagement ring with its flaming solitaire.

"If you won't try to eat my Easter egg," he said, "I'd like a chance to eat my angry words of the last few minutes."

"All right," said May, "and I'll join you."

He looked fair into her laughing eyes, then took her unresisting hand in his and slipped the ring on her finger.

"Can you understand the giver's mind now?" he asked.

"Yes," she whispered.

"And do you object to it?" She made no answer, but it was one of those cases where an answer in words is entirely superfluous. When he finally decided that he "really must go now," he stooped down to pick up the remains of his Easter egg and found that it was broken fairly in the middle between the big and little ends.

"Look!" he exclaimed. "Fate has arbitrated our discussion. The shell has broken just where I had cut the hole in it to put in the ring."

"That's all right," said May saucily. "I accept the decision, but I think we had better have scrambled eggs and omelets for awhile at first."

BOWSER IN HISTORY

SELECTED AS ONE OF FIFTY OF THE MOST EMINENT CITIZENS.

His Wife Aids Him in Recalling the Most Striking Incidents of His Life, Which Would Have Covered Over Ten Pages but For an Accident.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

WHEN Mr. Bowser came home the other evening, he didn't have "that tired feeling" to warn Mrs. Bowser that he proposed to kick up a row over the gas bill; but, on the contrary, he was stepping high and swelling up with importance. She knew in an instant that some one had been flattering him, and that if she only gave him rope enough he would explain all. He looked at her and talked to her in a patronizing way throughout the dinner hour, and he appeared to be on his guard against letting himself down.

"HE WAS KICKED IN THE STOMACH BY A COW."

When dinner was over, he lighted his cigar and paced back and forth across the sitting room with his head up and shoulders squared, and the cat made up her mind that he had either fallen heir to a big fortune or had discovered that one of his ancestors was at the helm of Noah's ark during a good share of the voyage. At last he spoke. "Mrs. Bowser," he began, "if you are not too busy this evening I should like your help for a few minutes."

"Certainly," she replied. "There was a gentleman in the office this afternoon with a book entitled 'Historic Men of America.' As it has not been issued yet, of course you have not heard of it. Perhaps I should have said a proposed book."

"Well?"

"The idea is to make a book of 500 pages. The lives of fifty of the most prominent men in America are to be written up, and each will fill ten pages. It is to be a very exclusive work, bound in gilt and morocco, and selling for $10 per volume. I have been se-ling because the girl played tag with another boy."

"By thunder, but you want to make out that I'm an ass!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he bobbed around on his chair.

"Nothing of the sort," she smilingly replied. "You were making history at a very youthful period, and it should all go into the book. At fifteen, as I have often heard you say, you attended your first circus, and a camel ate up your hat. At sixteen you fell in love with your Aunt Margaret and wanted her to elope with you. At seventeen—"

"Stop!" thundered Mr. Bowser as he brought his fist down on the table with such force as to lift the cat off the floor. "Do you suppose such twaddle as that is to pass into history? If it did, the reader would take me for a fool."

"Well, we'll skip a few years then," replied Mrs. Bowser. "At the age of twenty-one you rescued a cat from drowning. It was a very heroic action on your part. A few months later you challenged a young man to fight a duel because he called your sweetheart redheaded, and it was your fault that he failed to be on the ground. At the age of twenty-two lightning struck a neighbor's barn, and but for you a mule would have perished in the flames. A year later—"

"Hold on! where you are! I might have known how things would come out. If you insult me further, I may forget that you are my wife!"

"But who has insulted you? For you are going to make up ten pages of history, you will have to make use of all the incidents happening in your life. What has happened to you in the last twenty years, for instance? You fell in love with and married me, you bought a hog, you bought a cow, you bought chickens, you bought fire escapes and spring tonics and root beer and run-away horses and a bike, and you—"

"Madam, go up to your room!" said Mr. Bowser as he arose and pointed to the ceiling.

"But I want to help you to recall."

"Go up—go!"

"At the age of twenty-three you wanted to hang yourself in the cowshed because—"

"I say go!"

Mrs. Bowser went. It was the only way to avoid a row. She left Mr. Bowser pacing up and down and the ends of his hair curling and snapping, but she had scarcely reached her room when the doorbell rang. The historian had come to see Mr. Bowser about a full length portrait for the book. The historian had stopped at five or six schools on the way, and he had arrived with wheels in his head. He had only got seated in the back parlor when those wheels began to go round, and he looked at Mr. Bowser in a helpless way and asked:

"Are you Mr. Bowser or—the other feller? If you are Mr. Bowser, I don't want to say nozing—not a word—but if you are the other feller—"

"Well?"

"I want to tell you good zoke—good zoke."

Got an old chap on er strow for a hundred dollars; name's old Bowser, and he's an ass. If he don't give it away to his wife!"

Mr. Bowser rose up and took the historian by the neck and led him down the hall; then, as Mrs. Bowser looked over the railing, he opened the door and planted his shoe three times against future history and turned away with white face and swallowing at the lump in his throat. A deep, mysterious silence settled upon the house for the next hour, and Mrs. Bowser crept softly down stairs to find him asleep on the lounge and the cat hiding away in the darkest corner. His ten page history was closed.

M. QUAD.

MR. BOWSER TOOK THE HISTORIAN BY THE NECK.

lected as one of the fifty to be written up.

"Yes."

"And I want you to help me recall the leading incidents of my life and make a little sketch for the historian to go by."

"How much is it going to cost you?" she asked.

"I take ten of the books at $10 each. He would have been glad to write me up free of cost, but of course we want at least ten of the books. He came all the way from Boston to see me, and should repeat one-half the nice things he said you would think me conceited. Let us see what we can get up. You know my life as well as I do myself."

Mrs. Bowser drew a long breath, looked at him in pity, and after a moment's thought she said:

"Well, at the age of ten years, which is probably going back far enough, you were kicked in the stomach by a cow and laid up for two weeks, as you have often related. That is the beginning of your history."

"Woman, do you mean to insult me?" he exclaimed as he flushed up.

"Of course not. If this is to be a history of you, we must get in all the incidents. Don't the histories of Washington record the cherry tree incident? The next thing to happen to you was when you were twelve years old; you fell into the family cistern."

"Are you talking in sarcasm?" he asked as he glared at her.

"Not at all. Every history of every great man goes back to his boyhood. Don't we read that Homer rescued a cat from the jaws of a dog when he was only four years old? All these early incidents are supposed to have a bearing on a man's character. Let me see; at fourteen you fell in love for the first time and wanted to commit suicide by swallowing a box of blue-shoke. Got an old chap on er strow for a hundred dollars; name's old Bowser, and he's an ass. If he don't give it away to his wife!"

Mr. Bowser rose up and took the historian by the neck and led him down the hall; then, as Mrs. Bowser looked over the railing, he opened the door and planted his shoe three times against future history and turned away with white face and swallowing at the lump in his throat. A deep, mysterious silence settled upon the house for the next hour, and Mrs. Bowser crept softly down stairs to find him asleep on the lounge and the cat hiding away in the darkest corner. His ten page history was closed.

WHERE IS THE WATCHFUL OWNER?

AMUSEMENTS

"The Katzenjammer Kids" with the opera. It was called the Klaw & Erlanger's laugh creators, will be seen at the Auditorium April 1st. It is utterly impossible for one to sit through the performance of this company without having hundreds of good laughs. The principal comedians, The Blondells, the mischievous kids, are simply indescribable and their support is made up of a collection of artists that leaves little to be desired. Music dancing, and acting, everything is executed in first-class style. If you enjoy a good hearty laugh don't fail to see the Katzenjammer Kids.

The attraction at the Auditorium on

"FOXY QUILLER."

April 4th, will be the successful melodrama "Midnight in Chinatown," the one attraction having a Chinese title which is not a Chinese drama. While possessing all the heart-thrilling pathos and soul-stirring excitement of the modern melodrama, it is completely devoid of morbid emotional features too frequent in most plays of this class of the present decade. The story begins and ends strongly; a uniformity of dramatic power and skill is apparent from the first act to the last, no situation or climax fading into commonplace or insignificance and each act without the slightest exaggeration. The realistic features of the play are enhanced by admirable scenic effects, and a large and capable company interpret the various roles.

Klaw & Erlanger will offer the first season the largest and best organized company that was ever in this country for the presentation of scenic

The SPORTING WORLD

International Golf.

Much interest has been aroused by the announcement of the approaching visit to America of a trio of leading British golfers, Harry Vardon and J. H. Taylor, ex-champions of the United Kingdom, and James Braid, the present holder of the open premiership, are to arrive here early in May to tour the country, giving exhibitions of their art and affording our experts a splendid opportunity for comparing their work with that of these three world beaters. Vardon and Taylor have at various times appeared on American links, but Braid has yet to make his initial bow.

HARRY VARDON.

consequently his playing will arouse peculiar interest. While Braid last year defeated both Vardon and Taylor for the title, he is thought to be inferior in playing ability to both of his rivals. Strict followers of form, in fact, are at a loss to account for his victory. Vardon and Taylor both defeated Braid in subsequent contests. Braid is a Scotchman and learned the game on the world famous St. Andrews links.

Plans of Turf Leaders.

Clarence Mackay and William C. Whitney will reserve a majority of their thoroughbreds to race exclusively at Saratoga, N. Y., this summer. Orders to that effect have been issued to Charles Hill and John Rogers, their respective trainers.

Mr. Mackay has informed his trainer that he is not anxious to race his horses before the Saratoga meeting. He has given orders to prepare only Banastar and Heno for the main events at Morris Park and Gravesend, N. Y. All the other horses are to be held in reserve. They will get a slow preparation for the big races at the American spa.

In order to give them plenty of time and to get them thoroughly acclimated all of the horses will be shipped to Saratoga in June. When the meeting begins, they will be in fine condition, it is expected, to compete with the best thoroughbreds in America.

Similar ties will be adopted by Mr. Whitney. He has a much greater number of horses in training than Mr. Mackay, and he will race more than two at the early meetings, but the majority of his horses will be held in reserve for his meeting at Saratoga.

Mr. Whitney has fairly lavished money on the track at Saratoga, as he hopes to make it the great rendezvous of turfmen in America. Stakes worth from $10,000 to $50,000 will be decided in order to have first class racing. Mr. Whitney realizes that high class horses must compete, so he will limit his early efforts on the turf this season to a few important races.

Interesting Fencing Bout.

English fencers are to invade America. A letter to Captain A. W. Sealholm of the Roxbury Latin school of Boston from Sergeant Major Betts, one of the best swordsmen in the British army, tells of the trip.

When Sergeant Betts and his party arrive, there will be some interesting bouts with the rapier. Sergeant Major Morgan of the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., and Sergeant Major Long of the garrison at Halifax, N. S., the foremost swordsmen of the British dominion on this side of the water, will doubtless be ready to cross blades with Betts. Besides, some of the maitres d'armes of New York and Boston of both French and Italian schools will be on edge for the Aldershot expert. Among those who will measure blades with the Britons are Professor Lucien Fournon, M. Prevost, J. L. Rondelle, Count Spaghati and Henry Godel.

Ascent Sluggish Lajoie.

Lajoie, the premier slugger of the American, will have to look a little closer to his laurels next season. Jess Burkett will be in the same league, and "the Crab" always beat the Frenchman when both were bobobbing in the National.

With Western Golfers.

The Western Golf association has admitted the following clubs to membership: Springfield (Ill.) Golf club, Euclid club of Cleveland, Omaha Country club and the Kent Country club of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Great Turf Winner.

The peer Roy Wilkes won $75,000 in prizes during his turf career. L. A. Davies paid $10,000 for him in 1888 and won him out in his first race after the purchase.

PROCLAMATION

Relating to the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors on Election Day.

Whereas, An election is to be held in the city of Newark, Ohio, on Monday, the Seventh Day of April 1902

And whereas, the statutes of the state of Ohio provide that whoever sells or gives away any spirituous, vinous or malt liquors on any election day, or being the keeper of a place where any of such liquors are habitually sold and drunk, fails on any election day to keep the same closed, shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars, ($100) and imprisoned not more than ten days.

Therefore, I, H. Atherton, Mayor of the City of Newark, Ohio, in compliance with the requirements of the statutes of the state, hereby set forth such provisions of law, and proclaim that all violations of the same on said day will subject the offender to speedy punishment.

All police officers are commanded to enforce the laws aforesaid.

EASTER SUNDAY

JOYOUSLY CELEBRATED IN ALL THE CHURCHES OF THE CITY

Splendid and Inspiring Music by the Choirs and Eloquent Sermons by the Ministers.

The festival of Easter day was joyously celebrated with special music in all of the churches of the city on Sunday. Elaborate programs had been prepared by choir leaders for the edification and uplifting of the worshippers which were carried out as published in Saturday's Advocate. It was a general observation, joined in by all denominations and all creeds, for the festival means the resurrection of nature as well as of the Saviour. No wonder then that in triumphal melody the swelling "Alleluia" ascended from throats of throats assembled around the altars of worship. The festival spirit in celebration of His victory over death pealed from the stirring tongues of the church organ, arose from the anthem of the choir, dominated the sermon of the pastor and found resplendent expression from the fiers of nature's tribute of flowers and their incense of delicate perfume.

In all the churches of the city the beauty of the flowers was used for the adornment, and they greeted in profusion, with their brightness, purity and sweetness, the members of the congregations of Newark when they entered the houses dedicated to God on Easter morn. The music was elaborate. The best voices of the city were heard in song, and were accompanied by the best instrumental and vocal music. As a festival of the church Easter is the most solemn and consecrated of the year—placing upon Christianity the seal of immortality, and as such it was celebrated in all the churches of the city. The sermons of the various ministers were in keeping with the day and were on the line of "The Resurrection," all being attentively listened to.

The observance of Easter is almost as old as the Christian church. It was recognized as a religious festival within 300 years after the resurrection of Christ, but it was not until the eighth century that its celebration became common throughout the Christian world. In the western countries of Europe it was always kept on Sunday, but the churches in Asia kept it on the third day after the 14th of the Jewish month Nisan, whatever day of the week this might be. This was the Jewish rule, which aimed to keep the actual anniversary of the day of the resurrection (as we observe Christmas) while the gentiles preferred to observe the Lord's day which comes next after the actual anniversary. The council of Arles, in A. D. 314 ordered Easter to be observed at the same time throughout Christendom, and the councils of Nicaea, A. D. 325, ruled that it was to be celebrated only on the Lord's day, and not on a week day. It was not, however, until the year 714 that the computation of the time of Easter was fully settled and uniformity secured. The rule was then laid down that Easter day is always the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after the 21st of March. If the full moon happens on a Sunday, Easter day is the Sunday after.

SENSATIONAL

Damage Suit Brought by Creighton Against Ex-Congressman Morey at Hamilton, Ohio.

Hamilton, O., March 31.—Edward E. Creighton, a Hamilton merchant, added a most sensational chapter in his noted divorce case by filing a damage suit for $50,000 against H. L. Morey, whom he previously named as co-respondent in his cross suit for divorce from Catherine E. Creighton. The suit was filed in the Common Pleas court by Mr. Creighton's attorneys. After alleging that defendant is endeavoring to deprive plaintiff of the fellowship of his wife, and to alienate her affections, he charges that Morey at various times between November, 1900, and the fourth day of February, 1902, was guilty of adultery with his (Creighton's) wife. It will be recalled that Mr. Creighton had named Mr. Morey, who is Mrs. Creighton's counsel, as co-respondent in his cross-plea for divorce. Mrs. Creighton has vigorously denied this charge and today the wife's application for temporary alimony is being heard before Judge Belden. The prominence of the parties to the suit, both socially and politically has stirred Hamilton to its innermost circles, and the outcome is being awaited with the greatest of interest.

A Day In The Country.

A homestead on the hillside! not the one made famous long ago by the distinguished authoress, Mrs. Mary J. Holmes, but one teeming on the front of a wooded hill, and in the brightness of the morning of the 14th the mistress sat playing her needle. It is the home of Mrs. Nancy Roada Geiger, and her son, Mr. J. E. Geiger, and it was the 77th birthday anniversary of the lady. The writer met a kindly welcome and soon we were busy with our needles. Before the noon hour dinner was announced, and such a dinner! abundant, well cooked and well planned to satisfy hunger.

Mr. Geiger is an expert gardener, and all of the small fruits and fine vegetables come from his garden, each in their season. The comfortable barns, and other outbuildings surround the homestead, where we found the well kept horses, cattle, hogs and sheep.

The knowledge gained from agricultural papers and in experimenting is well applied and now they are enjoying the results of the labor of last year. The new and beautiful electric cars pass by the house at a short distance, bringing the world to the quietness of the country, and a day spent in that hillside home will ever be a pleasant memory.

No trouble to prepare quick breakfasts if you have Mrs. Austin's famous Pancake Flour. Ready in a moment.

HORACE GREELEY

WROTE TO HON. A. B. CLARKE IN OCTOBER, 1861,

Declaring That He Stood by the Discredited Fremont Proclamation. Almost Unreadable.

Experts in chirography claim that they can tell the character of any individual by his handwriting, and they have certain rules in their cult for thus judging human characteristics.

To those who possess the esoteric knowledge, the plain, bold easily read, writing as well as the almost unreadable scrawl tells its story, and the writer is judged by these experts in a different manner than would be the case by esoteric readers.

Very often a very illiterate man may write a "hand" that would be almost perfect according to the rules of any system of penmanship, whereas a man of education and refinement may write an almost unreadable manuscript.

As a matter of fact some of the greatest men in history have written letters that it was almost impossible to decipher. If a man were judged by his handwriting, under the rules of penmanship, no one in American history would have suffered more than Horace Greeley. When editor of the Tribune it is said, that he kept one compositor to set up the editorials as he was the only man in the office who could decipher his hieroglyphic "copy."

This may or may not be true, but it is not to be disputed that his handwriting is almost unreadable.

Mr. Charles W. Miller, the attorney, has in his possession a well preserved letter written by Mr. Greeley to Hon. A. B. Clark, forty-one years ago. This letter is an answer to one written by Mr. Clark, in which he criticized the policy of the New York Tribune, then edited by Greeley, for its policy in regard to Lincoln's administration, during the summer of 1861.

The orthography is perfect as well as the punctuation, but the writing is very difficult to decipher. After some trouble the letter was "translated" as follows:

Office of Tribune,
New York, Oct. 17, 1861.
Dear Sir: You are entirely mistaken in supposing that no criticism of the acts of the administration is tolerated or encouraged by the Tribune. On the contrary you will see that the Tribune dissects pointedly from the President's view of the relations of slavery to this war and maintains the view embodied in Gen. Fremont's Proclamation. At the same time it is manifest that in the agony of a struggle for National existence much must be passed over in silence that at other times might be freely reprehended. We cannot afford to topple down the government, but our safety lies in rallying around a common head.
Yours,
HORACE GREELEY.

A. B. Clark, Esq.
The Fremont proclamation, was one issued by Gen. John C. Fremont in 1861, when he took command of the western division of the Union army with headquarters in St. Louis. In this proclamation Fremont declared martial law within the limits of his department and decreed instant death to any rebel found bearing arms, their real and personal property forfeited and their slaves, if any, free.

This embarrassed the government to such an extent that that time that Fremont was superseded in October, 1861, the same month as Greeley's letter was written, standing by this proclamation.

AN EASTER COMEDY

BY A. B. LEWIS.

[Copyright, 1902, by A. B. Lewis.]
Mrs. Dubbs hadn't lived with Mr. Dubbs twenty-five years without knowing his peculiarities. He never made Christmas presents; he never observed birthdays; he did not regard Easter as the proper day to bring out new headgear. Mrs. Dubbs had always rebelled about the latter, and the time had finally come when she meant to break out in open defiance. She began long weeks ahead to cut nickels and dimes off the household expenses and lay them aside for another purpose, and when at last Easter dawned near she counted up her savings and found the sum sufficient to buy what her soul craved for. She didn't expect that Dubbs would be pleased, but if she got out of it without a solemn lecture she would be more than satisfied.

Quickly enough, Mr. Dubbs had not only come to the conclusion that he needed a new hat, after wearing his old one for five years, but he so far went back on his record as to decide to bring it out Easter Sunday. It took considerable scheming on his part to buy a new "plug" and get it home and deposit the box on the spare bed up stairs the day before Easter, and, although he was home when his wife's new bonnet arrived in its box, it was snatched up stairs into the spare room and left beside his hat without his being any the wiser.

That evening as Mr. Dubbs was returning home from the store he found a puppy on the doorstep shivering with the cold, and in the goodness of his heart, for he was good in streaks, he picked up the pup and carried it inside. In the goodness of his heart Mrs. Dubbs welcomed and fed the stranger, and, instead of turning it out in the cold world, she let it remain and make itself at home. Shortly before bedtime Mrs. Dubbs smiled to herself as she lool ed over at her husband and said:

"John, I do wish I had a new bonnet for tomorrow."

"Y-e-s, and I wish I had a new hat," he mumbled in reply.

There was silence for a time as she patched a pair of trousers and he read his paper, and then he suddenly started up and remarked:

"I wonder where that pup is?"

"He must be up stairs," she gasped as she looked around.

It was a race between them to the top of the stairs, and they came out neck and neck. As they stood in the door of the spare room they saw the dog. He was still chewing away, but had nearly finished. On the bed and floor were strips of handboxes and pieces of hat trim and hat crown, and mingled with them were ends of ribbons, bits of straw and glass ornaments and torn velvet. The pup had done his best.

"My Easter bonnet!" wailed the wife.

"My Easter hat!" shouted the husband.

And that was all—all except Mr. Dubbs picked up the pup.

Among the visitors present were: Mrs. Cordray, Mrs. Wm. Freer, Mrs. Rawlings, Miss Gladys Hillard, Margery Lawhead and Messrs. Earl Prior and Clyde Cully.

The high school boys met after chapel Friday to discuss athletics. It was decided to enter Field day contests at Mt. Vernon. Field Day will be under the auspices of the park at Mt. Vernon and all the high schools in this part of the state are expected to enter. The Newark boys will enter for base ball and track events and will be under the able training of Prof. Austion. The first practice was held last Saturday by all expecting to enter. Quite a number are expected to enter and it is hoped that as the time approaches the number will increase, not decrease, so that Newark may be well represented. Robert Stracker has been elected captain of the track team and Homer Jones captain of the base ball team.

The Gardner season apparatus purchased by the Board for the geography class has arrived and proved most satisfactory.

The teachers of the seventh and eighth grades met Thursday and were given a most interesting illustrated talk on the "Holy Land" by Superintendent Townsend.

Helen Tucker of the tenth grade has been absent during the past week.

The Newark schools will be given this week for spring vacation.

Professor J. W. Guthrie, principal of the high school of Alliance, O., visited the superintendent Friday afternoon.

Margaret Nies has withdrawn from the ninth grade.

Stella Howard presided at the piano in chapel during the past week.

Martha Wilson of the Senior class was on the sick list last week.

Supt. Townsend will make an address at the County Teachers' examination at Bloomingburgh, O., April 26.

Minnie Lott of the tenth grade was absent from school last week.

Because King Edward now opens Parliament in person the peers of the realm are taking a keener interest in legislation. The attendance in the Upper House this season both of peers and of peersesses whenever there is a prospect of debate or even of "conversation" is noticeably larger than usual.

A piece of genuine Japanese lacquer costs the native almost a life time to perfect and is produced by hundreds of thin coats of lacquer laid on at considerable intervals of time, the value consisting rather in the labor bestowed than in the quality of the material used.
